ARE RAW FOODS SUPERIOR TO COOKED?

Proponents are wont to ecstatically describe the nutritional miracles of natural raw foods. In their books, directors of three health resorts have attributed their personal terminal cancer cures to raw foods. "Miraculous gifts of nature," already "cooked by solar energy," raw vegetables "have the highest nutritive value as live food handed us by nature." Dr. Kirstine Nolfi, director of Humlegarden Sanatorium in Denmakr, flatly states that the use of raw vegetable food totally cures or mitigates all infectious diseases. Dr. Joseph Evers of the Hachen clinic in Germany claims to have helped some 15,000 sufferers of multiple sclerosis in a 40-year-period with a diet of raw organically grown foods.

Vegetarians, and vegans who avoid even animal by-products such as eggs and dairy products, are urged to serve a raw vegetable, raw fruit, raw sprouts or unroasted seeds at each meal, since, it is said, heat destroys vitamins and amino acids.

But Adele Davis, the "high priestess" of nutrition, claims cooking vegetables concentrates nutrients so intensely that a small serving equals an amount impossible to eat raw. With four common vegetables – carrots, cabbage, tomatoes and celery – cooking doubles and quadruples vitamin A and C, and minerals like iron, calcium phosphorus, and potassium.

Many scientists believe that cooking permitted the rapid evolutionary advances of man in the past 10,000 years. Man's rapid advance, they say, took place in areas where fresh fruit was rarely available and staple foods were all cooked.

Soviet scientists have discovered that natural raw foods contain many substances "very dangerous to animals, including man." They found chemical irritants in raw foods which can attack the digestive system from the mouth down to the intestines. Aflotoxins, causing cancer, exist in many raw grains and nuts, which explains "epidemic forms of liver cancer" in some African nations. Nitrates that change to deadly nitrites in our bodies exist in many raw vegetables. The "biochemical antagonists" in some plants destroy the vitamins and amino acids in our bodies.

But, say Soviet nutritionists, there is no "specific table of contents" for food good for everyone. What is good for the individual is what he or she enjoys eating and makes the individual feel better. However, if you prefer things cooked, both Soviet nutritional science and Adele Davis are right behind you.

An addict shoots smack; shortly afterward, he or she is dead. The examining coroner routinely attributes the death to an overdose of heroin. But was it really too much heroin that killed the addict? Drug researcher Edward M. Brecher thinks not.

Writing in the New York Times Magazine (November 19, 1972), Brecher cites evidence that heroin doses taken by addicts come nowhere near lethal levels. And laboratory studies have shown that even enormous doses of heroin do not kill. Furthermore, according to New York City medical examiner Dr. Michael M. Baden, tissue cultures and urine samples taken from a number of dead addicts thought to have OD'd did not show signs of heroin overdoes. Nor did heroin packets or syringes found near these addicts indicate the injection of abnormal amounts of the drug. Additionally, death from a real heroin overdose would be slow, unlike the sudden death in the typical "OD" case.

So, why do thousands of addicts die right after shooting up? Brecher states two possibilities. Addicts might be reacting adversely to the quinine which is generally mixed in with heroin sold on the street. Or heroin might become lethal at low doses when combined with other drugs – barbiturates, speed, alcohol – addicts usually ingest. In any case, Brecher's evidence clearly demonstrates that even when addicts are especially careful of their dose levels, they still stand a good chance of dying after the needle has gone in.

PUTTING ON THE DOG

(AFS) – Sporting new furs this winter? Chances are you're wearing dog pelts: a Dalmatian stole, chow-skin coat, or poodle gloves!

Customs officials have no way of telling how many dog products are being imported into the U.S. Dozens of names are used to label domestic rabbit furs; for example "mink-dyed" coney means rabbit dyed to look like mink. It is just as easy to invent new names for dogs.

The sale of dog-pelts and meat has been common in Europe for many years. One company – Smithfield Animal Products – ships 40 to 50 thousand pelts a year to Germany and Belgium. A Yorkshire firm handles about 500 monthly.

Most of the dead dogs are supplied by the animal shelters of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Like the U.S.A., England has its pet population crisis, and must destroy an estimated 250 thousand homeless dogs a year.

Dog products are "a la mode" in Paris also. Adam Pianco, director of the Pierre D'Albi firm, said his customers don't object to wearing skins of dogs killed for meat in a "faraway place like China." He got into the business when he saw chow furs at a show, then he ordered 500 skins and fashioned them into coats that brought over a hundred dollars each at wholesale to European shops. Now he's importing cat and rat skins from China!

One businessman, Van de Sandt de Villiers Smit of South Africa, announced a plan to raise dogs commercially for their meat and fur. Ralph Landon reports in the July 10th issue of Midnight that public response was so bitter and far-reaching in condemning Smit that he was forced to abandon his scheme.

Apparently, the idea of breeding dogs for flesh and fur is abhorrent; what we find shocking is the public apathy which (according to the Humane Society of the United States) allows us to add ten thousand puppies and kittens per hour to the already staggering pet surplus. HSUS says 52 million U.S. families own more than 90 million dogs and cats.

CAN 500,000 INVOLUNTARY MENTAL

CAN 500,000 INVOLUNTARY MENTAL PATIENTS ALL BE WRONG?

Virtually anything we think, say or do may be religiously founded. While freedom of religion is guaranteed in the Constitution, it is regularly denied in commitment courts and psychiatric institutions, where certain unconventional thoughts and acts, which may be religiously motivated, are interpreted as symptomatic of mental illness.

Almost all psychiatrists today accept mental illness as a fact, although there is considerable disagreement among them as to what it is and who's got it. Such judgments vary greatly, depending on the personality and belief-system of the diagnostician. For example, "non-religious" psychiatrists like Freud, who dismissed religion as "a universal obsessional neurosis," might easily read "symptom" into almost any unusual characteristic of a religiously oriented person, especially if he did not belong to a well-established religious group or, if belonging to one, veered decisively from its accepted teachings and practices. Jesus of Nazareth would certainly fall into the latter category.

To appreciate the worthlessness of current mental illness theory, consider how a psychiatrist might evaluate this Jesus, if his psychiatric history were based on the Gospel account of his life. Here are eight verses from this source followed in parenthesis by the symptoms they might indicate:

* "And when Jesus was baptized, he went up immediately from the water, and behold, the heavens were opened and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and alighting on him; and lo, a voice from heaven, saying, 'This is my Beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased.' " Matthew 3:16, 17 (HALLUCINATION)

* "Then Jesus was led up by the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted by the devil. And he fasted forty days and forty nights." Matthew 4:1, 2 (WITHDRAWAL)

* "But woe to you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because you shut the kingdom of heaven against men; for you neither enter yourselves or allow those who would enter to go in." Matthew 23:13 (HOSTILITY)

* "You see all those (buildings of the temple), do you not? Truly, I say to you, there will not be left here one stone upon another, that will not be thrown down." Matthew 24:2 (NIHILISTIC DELUSIONS)

* "Now as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and broke it, and gave it to the disciples and said, 'take, eat; this is my body.' " Matthew 26:26 (OUT OF TOUCH WITH REALITY)

* "The woman said to him, 'I know that Messiah is coming (he who is called Christ); when he comes, he will show us all things.' Jesus said to her, 'I who speak to you am he.' " John 4:25, 26 (MESSIANIC COMPLEX)

* "(Jesus asked,) 'Why do you seek to kill me?' The people answered, 'You have a demon! Who is seeking to kill you?' " John 7:19, 20 (PERSECUTORY IDEAS)

* "I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one comes to the Father, but by me." John 14:6 (DELUSIONS OF GRANDEUR)

I make no judgment as to whether Jesus was right or wrong in his beliefs, but I maintain that he had the right to them, as well as the right to try to convince others of their validity. In his time, Jesus obviously did not have these rights for he was condemned as a heretic and/or revolutionary and crucified. In our time, he in all likelihood would be condemned as a paranoid schizophrenic and committed to a psychiatric institution, where he could be subjected to the progressive violence of "intensive treatment," including forced medication, aversion therapy, shock treatment, and psychosurgery.

If you think this is far-fetched, read what William Hirsch, a 20th century white-coated Pharisee, had to say about the mental condition of Jesus (as quoted by Albert Schweitzer in The Psychiatric Study of Jesus): "Everything that we know about him conforms so perfectly to the clinical picture of paranoia that it is hardly conceivable that people can even question the accuracy of the diagnosis."

What do the treatments cited above really entail?

PATIENTS ALL BE WRONG?

* Forced Medication: almost all inmates in psychiatric institutions are offered drugs to make them passive and manageable. It is "an offer that cannot be refused." Those who do are held down and injected with even more powerful drugs.

* Aversion Therapy: anectine and prolixin are two of the better known "fright drugs." The Ludovico Technique in "A Clockwork Orange" clues you in to what they're like.

* Shock Treatment: Ken Kesey calls it a combination "sleeping pill, electric chair, and torture rack."

* Psychosurgery: a clean-sounding word for the filthy business of menticide – or mind murder. It's the psychiatric equivalent to burning at the stake, but instead of destroying the victim body and soul, only his soul is destroyed. G. Rylander, a lobotomist, described one of his cases in William Sargent's Battle For The Mind: "... a Salvation Army worker, a very high-ranking officer ... married a clergyman. For years she lay in the hospital, constantly complaining that she had committed sins against the Holy Ghost. She complained of it for weeks and months, and her poor husband did his best to distract her, but without success. Then we decided to operate upon her ... After the dressing had been taken off, I asked her, 'How are you now? What about the Holy Ghost?' Smiling, she answered, 'Oh, the Holy Ghost; there is no Holy Ghost.' "

Most institutional psychiatrists use or recommend these treatments, or at least sanction them through their silence. A few courageous psychiatrists and other doctors have strongly criticized their use, some calling them "tortures."

Tom Szasz, the Tom Paine of an incipient counter-psychiatry revolution and himself a psychiatrist, has charged that involuntary mental hospitalization is "a crime against humanity" and that "mental illness is a myth" used to justify the control of individuals who have not violated any laws, and therefore, cannot be criminally prosecuted and imprisoned, but whose nonconformist ideas and behavior disturb or otherwise inconvenience the community.

Hundreds of thousands of human beings are now in psychiatric institutions against their will. Restricted as they are, they cannot properly defend themselves and so must look to the outside for assistance.

For them, the logic of 1984 is a reality. The slogans of Orwell's futuristic classic – FREEDOM IS SLAVERY, WAR IS PEACE, IGNORANCE IS STRENGTH – have their counterparts in institutional psychiatry, where CONFORMITY IS SANITY, MYSTICISM IS MADNESS, AND PUNISHMENT IS THERAPY.

If there is no method in madness, it's certainly there in the way society deals with it.
